Hunterdon Chamber's 30th Business Expo

The date has been set for the 30th Hunterdon County Business & Home Expo and Restaurant Showcase, presented by PNC Bank, by The Hunterdon County Chamber of Commerce for Thursday, November 9th from 2:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. at the, newly renovated, Next Level Arena on Case Boulevard in Flemington. Once again offered this year is continuous, shuttle service from convenient, free parking at the J.P. Case Middle School. This year's event, which is free and open to the public, will feature over 130 businesses showcasing the unique qualities that make Hunterdon a great place to shop, work and do business

There is still room for businesses looking to meet consumers, and other businesses, thanks to the larger venue provided by Next Level Arena. The Hunterdon Chamber welcomes all businesses in Hunterdon, or those who do business inside the county, to participate in the Expo. Booths are available at a range of highly affordable rates and can be booked by calling the Chamber at 908-782-7115 or visiting their website www.HunterdonChamber.org.

The Food Showcase will be returning this year. The popular showcase will take place from

PNC BANK at the Hunterdon Business Expo - Presenting Sponsor

5:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. and will feature Hunterdon eateries serving free samples. A limited amount of booths are available for restaurants who would like to participate in the showcase.

As always sponsors play a major role in helping the Hunterdon County Business & Home Expo and Restaurant Showcase come together. PNC Bank has returned as a presenting sponsor this year. Additional sponsorships are available. If businesses are interested in one of these exclusive spots they should contact the Chamber immediately.

More information about the 30th Hunterdon County Business & Home Expo and Restaurant Showcase can be found at the website of the Hunterdon County Chamber of Commerce, www.Hunterdon-Chamber.org, or by calling (908) 782-7115.

Chamber Hosts Courthouse Square Briefing

READINGTON, N.J. – Jack Cust reviewed his plans to redevelop Flemington’s Union Hotel and surrounding properties at a meeting sponsored by the county’s Chamber of Commerce.

Cust’s Flemington Center Urban Renewal, LLC is the designated redeveloper for the properties, which Cust said he’s been working on since 2015.

The project, called Courthouse Square, “has been a very complex project, with many twists and turns,” Cust told the group gathered at Stanton Ridge on Oct. 4. “Public opinion and support has been very strong, especially from the business community.”

That support includes the county’s Chamber of Commerce, and also county Freeholders, who note its consistency with their Comprehensive Economic Development Strategy. But, as Cust noted, the plan also has what he called “a handful of objectors.” Chief among them may be Friends of Historic Flemington, who last week filed another lawsuit – this one seeking to have the plan declared “invalid.” Those actions “have made the project more complicated than it needed to be,” Cust said. “These opponents continue to spread misinformation in public and through social media outlets, despite our efforts to continuously modify plans and preserve buildings. We’ve modified these plans four different times, (yet) the resistance continues by this small but vocal, passionate group.” Here are the “false statements” Cust targeted in his presentation:

- “The Main Street buildings are all bringing demolished.”
“This is not true, as we are preserving and restoring both the Union Hotel and Hunterdon County Bank building exteriors to their original state,” Cust said.
- “The borough will be saddled with substantial infrastructure costs.”
Not so, Cust says. “We are responsible for all costs on-site and off-site that are impacted by the developer.”
- “The tax burden of this development will be shifted to the residents with increased taxes.”

Cust said he’d use a “widely-used development tool established by New Jersey, known as a PILOT (Payment in Lieu of Taxes) ... to create much needed revenues to the borough ... An independent report projected the annual revenues to the borough from these collective properties to increase from the current amount of approximately $60,000 to more than $600,000,” Cust said, generating almost $21 million over the life of the PILOT.

“This is $18 million more in revenues than the current state of these properties and will certainly spur additional development and investment within the borough,” he said.

Cust said he’s established his CourthouseSquareFlemington.com website “that portrays nothing but the facts” to counter what he called “constant misstatements” by the plan’s objectors.

Notwithstanding the objectors, the borough’s Planning Board will resume its public hearing on the development application at 7 p.m. Oct. 11 in the old Historic Courthouse on Main Street.

Joint Statement from Business Leaders on CBT Cleanup Bill

The New Jersey Business & Industry Association, NJ State Chamber of Commerce, NJ CPA Society, NJ Retail Merchants Association, Commerce & Industry Association of NJ, Morris County Chamber of Commerce, Hunterdon County Chamber of Commerce, Somerset County Business Partnership, NJ Food Council, and Meadowlands Regional Chamber released the following joint statement today regarding A-4495/S-2989, commonly known as the Corporation Business Tax cleanup bill.

"Today's action goes beyond technical corrections to the Corporation Business Tax (CBT) bill passed in July, and places a significant additional financial burden on New Jersey's largest job creators. This strikes at the heart of our regional and global competitiveness, particularly for the state's innovation sector.

"These increased costs fall on the very same job creators who are also shouldered with a CBT surcharge, which gives New Jersey the second highest CBT rate in the country, and soon to be the highest. These increased costs will stifle innovation at the exact time that our state goal is to reclaim our stature as the Innovation State.

"Yesterday the Tax Foundation noted that New Jersey is dead last for business tax climate and this was before this action today. As such, New Jersey is an unequivocal outlier in terms of tax burden.

"We have been calling on our policymakers to take actions to grow New Jersey's economy, which requires that we create new jobs and retain those that we have. Both are vital needs if our state hopes to escape from our current fiscal dilemma and begin to achieve greater prosperity. Aggressive and achievable plans for growing our economy must be created now. We cannot wait any longer.

"Today's actions will hurt innovation and job growth and encourage companies to invest outside of New Jersey. New Jersey needs long-term sustainable solutions to address the fiscal challenges that exist in the state. We ask Gov. Phil Murphy to veto this bill."

Sharing Financial Wisdom With Your Kids

Parents often try to impart their values about money to help their children establish a strong financial foundation. If you are a parent, talking to your kids about money can help them learn how to be financially responsible, self-supporting adults. To get the conversation flowing, consider using these conversation starters depending on your child's age.

Begin with basics for your preschooler. Look for opportunities to teach values that will help your child develop positive financial attitudes and behaviors later in life. For example, the concept of sharing with others is something most young children can grasp. Talking about what you're thankful for and involving kids in philanthropy can help instill gratitude.

Explain financial building blocks to your elementary school student. As your child progresses through school, start introducing the difference between needs and wants. Present the concepts of cost and quality to teach your child how to discern value. Give your child the chance to make some simple financial decisions that involve delayed gratification, such as setting aside a small allowance to buy a toy.

Understand that your middle schooler may be watching more than listening. Kids tend to be peer-oriented in the preteen years and may be less receptive to parental advice. Keep talks short, but don't abandon the mission. Remember that your actions speak volumes about your values. For example, if your child hears you continually talking about a new car purchase or sees you frequently shopping, he or she may pick up similar behaviors toward material goods.

Consider involving your child in donations or charitable work you are passionate about, or encourage him or her to support a cause of their own.

Encourage your high school student to think about the future. Now is the time to discuss college costs and encourage saving for college expenses. Talk to your child about what you plan to contribute and what portion you expect them to pay. Discuss whether student loans will play a role and their potential impact down the road. Conversations about college and majors can include frank discussions about the job market and future income potential. Discuss day-to-day financial responsibilities as well, such as how to maintain a checking account and debit card and how to protect accounts from fraud.

Help your college student prepare for independence. Counsel your child about the importance of living within their means and establishing and maintaining a good credit record. Explain how to use a credit card appropriately (and how to avoid fees and other credit troubles). As graduation nears, discuss your expectations for your child's transition from student to working adult. Offer yourself as a resource for guidance on how to seek fulfilling work, negotiate a good salary and navigate the world of employee benefits.

Inspire your college graduate to embrace adulthood. Once your child becomes financially independent, be thoughtful about how you approach money topics. Let your newly employed college graduate know you are willing to offer support and guidance yet steer clear of making decisions for him or her. Allow your child space to decide their financial goals. Continue sharing advice based on your experience, such as the importance of saving for retirement early, having appropriate insurance or creating an estate plan. Encourage your child to establish a relationship with a financial advisor who can provide an objective perspective and tools to create a financial plan unique to their goals.

It's worth it. If you want to help your child develop financial competence and independence, start the conversation early and keep it going. Sharing your financial values can enrich your relationship and bring lasting rewards.

Thanks to a collaboration with Girl Scout Heart of NJ, Harvest Family Success Center was able to offer 40 weeks of Girl Scout day camp at Camp Agnes Dewitt for free to Hunterdon County girls from 1st through 10th grade! The girls got to try geocaching, zip lining, working on a low ropes course, swimming, archery and so much more! Camp, transportation and lunch was all provided for free. What a wonderful experience for our local families!

Costco is proud to have provided backpacks to over 400 local children for the 2018/2019 school year. This year, the backpacks are stuffed with starter school supplies including: a zippered pencil pouch, 2 pocket style folders, 12" ruler, and an eraser. Recipients of the program included students and clients of F. Desmares

School, Kwenyan & Associates, United Way, The ARC of Hunterdon and our local Salvation Army.

Congratulations to Chamber Member Artist Paul Jennis! His hand painted scenes are featured on the bar ops of the new Chimney Rock Inn of Flemington. Of all his accomplishments and publications, now you can actually eat and drink on his work! Great job Paul!

Travel Inn & Suites has completed a $1 million renovation project to the locally-owned Route 202 North hotel, completely renovating all 37 rooms and expanding the facility with a breakfast area and meeting room.

Travel Inn & Suites Owner Mihir Patel of Branchburg said the extensive modernization initiative is part of a new branding project for the hotel that also includes a new logo, color scheme and signage.

The modernization included all new furniture, flooring, bathrooms, bedding, light fixtures, plumbing fixtures, window treatments, LCD high-definition televisions, next generation RFID electronic guest room looks, refrigerators, and microwaves in the hotel's 12 suites and 25 standard rooms. A new lobby with marble flooring and new computerized front desk that features electronic check-in and a second-floor addition, created a breakfast area/meeting room that enables Travel Inn & Suites to now offer a free hot breakfast for all guests that meets the brand standards of major hotel chains. Exterior renovation also included a face-lift of all the buildings with new columns and new stucco exterior, security system, newly paved parking lot and new LED exterior lighting.

For more information visit www.travelinnsuitesnj.com or contact Farooq Omar at info@travelinnsuitesnj.com.

Deductible Business Meal Expenses

The 2017 Tax Cuts and Jobs Act changed the law to deny income tax deductions for entertainment, amusement, or recreation expenses. However, the Act did not directly address the deductibility of business meals at the time of enactment. In response to this confusion, the IRS has issued interim guidance about the deductibility of business meals, until proposed regulations are released.

Under the interim guidance, the IRS will continue to allow 50% deductibility of meal expenses, if:

1. The expense is an ordinary and necessary business expense while the taxpayer is carrying out business.

2. The expense is not lavish or extravagant under the circumstances.

3. The taxpayer, or an employee of the taxpayer, is present when the meal is furnished.

4. The meal is provided to a current or potential customer of the business, and

5. For meals provided during or at an entertainment facility, they are purchased separately from the entertainment, or the cost of the meal is stated separately from the cost of the entertainment, on one or more receipts.

The 2017 Federal Tax Act was the biggest change in the Federal Income Tax Code since 1986 and due to its complexity, has caused much confusion. You will need expert professional advice to keep up with these new changes. Supreme Court Rules on Internet Sales Tax Collection

In a 5-4 ruling the Supreme Court issued their decision opening the door for states and localities to collect sales tax on interstate purchases made on the internet. This decision overturns the long-standing decision in Quill, issued by the Supreme Court in 1992, requiring a physical presence test be met by sellers in the jurisdiction imposing the tax. While no longer requiring a physical presence test for the requirement to collect a state's sales tax, the decision leaves open many questions for the individual state courts to address. In this case (South Dakota v. Wayfair, Inc.), the court remanded the case back to the state courts, but it implies that the South Dakota statute would meet the constitutional muster required, even though the Supreme Court did not rule that the law passes the Commerce Clause in its entirety. The South Dakota legislation contains a de minimus threshold of $100,000 of goods sold or 200 transactions during the current or prior calendar year in that state. Other states have recently imposed similar (but not necessarily identical) thresholds in their state.

Effective October 1, 2018, New Jersey will follow the South Dakota threshold. Businesses that sell on the internet will need to focus on transaction details, in determining Sales Tax Nexus, as opposed to having physical facilities and other indicators of physical presence in New Jersey.

As state sales tax rules in New Jersey and in other states constantly change, you will need expert professional advice to keep up with these changes. Hunterdon Holiday Parade on December 9th

Have Your Business or Group in the Parade

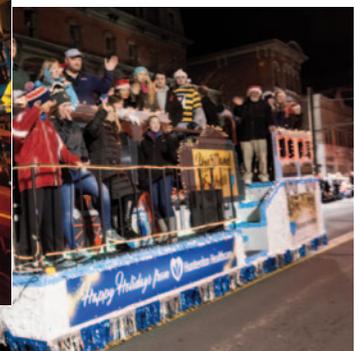

Mark your calendars! The Hunterdon County Chamber of Commerce will be hosting the Hunterdon Holiday Parade on Sunday, December 9th at 5p.m. on Main Street in the County Seat of Flemington

The Chamber is once again excited to have businesses, non-profits and musical acts gather together to help jumpstart the holiday season and add some extra cheer. The Holiday Parade provides a wonderful opportunity for the entire community to have a festive time with family, friends, and neighbors.

Local businesses can participate by having a float in the parade, plus by even becoming a sponsor. Please note that a holiday theme must be present on each float. To have a float in the parade, the cost for businesses is $100, and $25 for non-profit organizations.

The Chamber is also looking for volunteers to help decorate the parade route. If anyone is interested, please contact the Chamber at 908-782-7115. For more information on the Hunterdon Holiday Parade, please visit: www.hunterdonchamber.org
